

Non-optical	Optical (prescribed by low vision specialist)	Low tech assistive device	High Tech assistive device	Software
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> •Reading stand •Bold line or raised line paper •Hat or sunglasses to decrease glare or sensitivity to light •Bold pens/markers •Large print •Desk lamp •Items used to create tactile graphics or raised line drawings (Wikki Stix, foam shapes, etc.) •White cane 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> •Glasses •Contacts •Transition lenses •Telescopes •Magnifiers 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> •Braillewriter •Talking or large-print display calculator •Talking liquid-level indicator •Talking pedometer •Beeper ball •Braille or large print ruler, protractor, number line •Slate and stylus •Signature guide •Abacus •Braille •Tactile graphics •Tactile or large-print games 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> •Closed circuit television •Video magnification device •Braille embosser •Refreshable Braille display •Electronic Braille writer •E-book readers •Digital talking book player •Scanner •Laptop or desktop computer •Accessible touch tablet •Digital voice recorder •Electronic whiteboard •Talking global positioning systems •Electronic travel aids (laser cane, talking compass, etc.) 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> •Screen reading software •Screen enlargement/magnification software •Optical character recognition •Braille translation program •Audio-described videos •Digital books on CD or in other accessible formats such as MP3 or DAISY (Digital Accessible Information System – a standard for digital talking books)